DISTURBANCE IN "RING" CIRCLES

trary to the accepted belief, Frank is the power among the Mexicans in El Paso, a greater power by far than his brother, Ike. This was demonstrated at the school board election, when Ike was in danger of being swamped in the second ward and Frank, leaving his own precinct, jumped into the breach and saved the day.

In the fight for the district attorney ship Joe Nealon is strong. He will control to a very great extent the Catholic vote, as he is a prominent Knight of Columbus. He is also an Elk, but members of that order pay little attention to politics. Joe Dunne, the mayor of East El Paso, is for Joe Nealon, first, last and all the time and will undoubtedly swing the vote in that section for Joe.

How is strong down the valley, but he will have George Huffman to contend with. Huffman, dressed in a Prince Albert, will go down the valley and talk to the ranchers and farmers in such a convincing way that perhaps he will carry the lower districts for Nealon.

man for the place, because he knows the business. Of course, the salary would have to be as large as his earnings in the position he now occupies before he could consider it, but probably it will.

Robinson may not be a candidate for a second term as mayor, the opinion being expressed that he will tire of the job even before his present term expires, and though he will hold on until its expiration, he will not be a candidate again.

How About Booth? It is known that the job of city auditor D. C. Booth hangs by a very thin thread, and it will require but little to cut the thread. Booth has offended at least one of the aldermen by his alleged action of authorizing the purchase of goods without first referring the matter to the chairman of the council committee. Booth sends to the chiefs of the police and fire departments a large number of blank requisitions, which he has them sign before any items are marked thereon. Then, as they order goods, Booth simply marks down the articles required and he is protected by the signature of the chief of the department originally affixed to a blank paper. Alderman Blumenthal has objected to this practice and has contended that the chairman of the various committees of the council should see all requisitions before they are passed.

Those who know conditions and have felt the pulse of the public are of the opinion that there will be a merry war in city politics next spring.
